Major Incident training

Police officers, special constables and staff were joined by emergency services, voluntary rescue organisations, and other agencies on Saturday (23 March) for an exercise simulating a major incident.

The exercise, which took place at Wimbleball Lake in Exmoor National Park, simulated the response to a mid-air collision between two aircraft.

It was organised to allow Avon and Somerset Local Resilience Forum and other organisations to test their emergency procedures and plans.

Exercise Haddeo included involvement from Avon and Somerset Police; the fire and ambulance services; HM Coastguard; Exmoor search and rescue; Avon and Somerset Search and Rescue; BARB Search and Rescue; Wessex 4x4 Response; the Rapid Relief Team; the Royal Navy and Royal Air Force; The Salvage Marine Organisation; The Air Accident Investigation Branch, South West Lakes Trust; the Environment Agency; and South West, Wessex and Bristol water companies.

Simon Bale, Avon and Somerset Police's Contingency Planning Officer, said: "The exercise was a great success, allowing us to test our plans for these types of incidents and make sure we're ready and well-rehearsed in case they do happen.

"Lessons identified allow us to make any required changes to our multi-agency plans and prepare our responders and commanders to work together in order to save lives and minimise harm."
